National disgrace

■ The iron Chancellor turns into the robbing Chancellor!

Chancellor Gordon Brown is stealing hundreds of millions of pounds from the Mineworkers' Pension Scheme to help with a big spending spree before the election. The MPS was set up many years ago to invest money to provide pensions for Britain's coal miners and their widows. Back in 1994, with privatisation and widespread pit closures going through, the Conservative Government did a deal with the fund's trustees to guarantee miners' pensions, in exchange for the Treasury taking up to half of the annual surplus in the fund. Now some retired mineworkers receive less than £10 per week! This year alone, they are seeing Gordon Brown and Co. take a whopping £525 million of their pension money. Of course, we can guess where the money is being spent: Buying asylum seekers mobile phones, new cloths, houses and furniture, and God knows what else. Isn't it about time we had a government that put our people first? ■

Racism

■ Update on Oldham

Oldham council and police have responded to the problem of anti-white attacks in the town by appointing three extra Asian youth workers and sending a mobile police station into Asian areas. Said local Chief Supt. Eric Hewitt: "I would urge the local community to speak to our officers there if they have any information about the recent attacks, or if they themselves have recently been victimised." Local white residents are not reassured, and await their next Council Tax bills with growing resentment. Meanwhile thanks to the lightning demo against anti-white attacks (see page 7), the party has had some excellent publicity in the town ■

Double-standards

■ More police racism against white people

The Met is poised to cough up £1m to a black activist who made complaints of harassment against 47 police officers and branded them racist bullies. The police officers concerned may now sue Scotland Yard in turn. PC Keith Blakelock's widow couldn't sue anybody after he was hacked to death in Tottenham. ■

■ "Modern" farming putting our health at risk!

Fruit and vegetables are not as good for us as they were 50 years ago. Research by nutritionist

David Thomas has shown that their levels of essential minerals, such as calcium, copper, iron, and potassium, have plummeted. Mr. Thomas based his findings on data in The Composition of Foods, a study of the content of all major foods dating back to 1940. This shows that, for example: carrots have lost 75 per cent of the magnesium that protects against heart attacks, asthma and kidney stones; broccoli has 75 per cent less of the calcium essential for building strong bones, and runner beans have lost virtually the entire sodium content which used to make them valuable for the health of nerves and muscles. The problem is that modern farming techniques use artificial fertilisers that encourage plant growth, but do not replace mineral traces in the ground and discourage the take-up rate of trace elements. Backing the findings of the survey, Professor Tim Lang of the Centre for Food Policy at Thames Valley University said they revealed a worrying trend that needs to be exposed. "We are dying prematurely of coronary heart disease and cancer and we are being told to cut down on fat and eat more fruit and vegetables. But at the same time they are changing the content of what we are eating." ■

A mini-Stalin in the making

■ Asylum seekers double plus good

The Association of Chief Police Officers has issued a national guide on meeting the policing needs of asylum seekers. Author Robert Ayling, deputy chief constable of Kent, sets out his stall for rapid promotion by writing that, contrary to media impressions, crime has gone down in Dover and Kent since the recent asylum influx. "As in most groups, the overwhelming majority of asylum seekers are law-abiding citizens," he claims. Criticising the national media for negative reporting on the asylum issue, Deputy Commissar Ayling praises the local media for being "more positive." He forgets to mention, however, the possible connection between this and the fact that the editor of one local paper that did tell the truth was hounded from his job! Not that Deputy Obergruppenfuhrer Ayling has anything against the repression of free speech. Far from it; one of his report's key recommendations is that police forces around the country should prosecute people who express supposed 'racism' towards asylum seekers! ■

Foot and Mouth outbreak

■ A possible source for the disease disaster

Among the possible sources of the foot-and-mouth outbreak that has brought British agriculture to the brink of total disaster, the Daily Telegraph (2nd March) pinpointed the import of huge quantities of so-called 'bush meat' by West Africans. Clive Lawrence of transport company Ciel Logistics said that he had written to Agriculture Minister Nick Brown about the dangers posed by the importation of huge numbers of dead monkeys and other wild animals, but his letter had been ignored. Ministry of Agriculture officials seized 1,400 kg of 'bush meat' on one Heathrow flight alone, and had to call in the police to deal with a near-riot by passengers upset at having their 'delicacies' confiscated. Baggage handlers have also refused to handle suitcases full of maggot-infested flesh, including the carcasses of entire deer. Ah, 'diversity'! ■

● The party's ideology is built on four words...

Freedom, security, identity and democracy!

Ideology is a world outlook that stands above policy or rhetoric. Our policies may change from time to time, to fit in with the current of the people and the times, but our ideology never changes, and never has. Utopian ideologies, ranging from Communism to anarchism and liberalism, have a knack of creating small and fanatical elites, that see their mission in life as being to force their world outlook on the rest of us.

These ideologies are impervious to reason, and often when looked at objectively, are simply ridiculous. In 1999 our Chairman Nick Griffin stated that the nationalist outlook and ideology, by contrast, can be summed up in four key words, from which all the aspirations and views which we hold flow: Freedom; Security; Identity and Democracy.

The rules of practical politics

This was a clever move. It is basic common sense in politics to wrap your sometimes complex ideals into easily digestible phrases that are easily remembered and slip off the tongue with ease. No more than a tiny minority of the electorate ever bother looking into the ins-and-outs of our policies, this is why the laws of practical politics dictate the use of catch-phrases to sum up arguments. With one simple and small group of words it is possible to implant into the consciousness of a larger audience a basic understanding of where we are coming from, and the extent to which our core views mirror their own desires.

Freedom, security, identity and democracy

While "freedom, security, identity and democracy" is by no means a slogan, the words themselves are the nothing less than a highly simplified account of what we are really about. And what does each word entail? Freedom means just that. Freedom for our people in all manners and fields. Not just civil freedom, but national freedom too. Freedom from a European superstate as well as from meddling homegrown bureaucrats. It means Great Britain standing independently in the world, with full control over her own affairs. It means the freedom for our people to express any view they want, and the right not to be censored in the manner that we are all becoming used to in the creeping police state that Blair inherited from the Tories and is making ever more powerful and repressive. It means the freedom not to have MI5 read your emails, and to be able to tell anyone you want that some mini-Stalin of a police officer has demanded to know your computer password! It means the right for our businessmen to not be terrorized by semi-Marxist state control using red tape and mountains of regulations to exert control over the independent person who shows initiative.

A secure life for all

Security means the duty of the state to do its job and ensure a secure environment for the ordinary Briton. Security from crime, security from unemployment, and security from the international money system and the economic disaster it creates. It means our people enjoying a secure life in all respects. Identity means that we will ensure that our British culture, heritage and ethnic identity are not destroyed by our ethno-masochist politicians. We don't hate anyone, but we are proud of our British identity. This leads to our policies of stopping further immigration, and the introduction of big financial incentives to those immigrants who want to return to their lands of ethnic origin. Democracy means that the will of the people is enforced. Unlike the present liberal tyranny, where a self-appointed elite rides roughshod over public opinion, ignoring the overwhelming popular demand for reforms such as the restoration of the death penalty for premeditated murder where the conviction is backed by incontrovertible DNA evidence. The very many issues where the liberal elite are out of touch like this show how undemocratic the present system is. To help extend democracy, we want the introduction of citizens' initiative referenda, and the return of power from the EU and other alien bodies back to an accountable British parliament.

These, then, are our four words. Four popular words. It is time to start using them nationwide!

● Nick Griffin on a new liberal lie and a boatload of Kurds:

TIME IS RUNNING OUT FOR WESTERN CIVILISATION!

Race issue watchers have had an interesting month. First we had the unveiling of the results of the Human Genome Project. This truly great work of scientific discovery holds the key not just to conquering all kinds of inherited diseases and human weaknesses, but also to a huge advance in our understanding of, and respect for, human diversity. And that will surely be its long-term significance, despite the best efforts of a group of nervous "where's my next research grant coming from?" scientists and the liberal media to present the study as a triumph for egalitarianism.

At the same time, on a beautiful Mediterranean beach, the nightmare vision of Jean Raspail's novel The Camp of the Saints turned into reality. A rusting freighter, carrying more than 1,000 Kurds, ran aground and discharged its Third World cargo onto the shores of France - a country that is not just in many ways the cultural heart of Europe, but also the channel whereby a fresh tide of immigration is reaching the shores of our own, overcrowded island.

Stunning example

A stunning example of the sheer chutzpah of the partisans of Political Correctness, thus combined with the most powerful possible symbol of the way in which immigration is reaching levels that go beyond changing our society and threaten to overwhelm it altogether. The two events are too important to pass without analysis. The Human Genome Project, which involved scientists all over the world to create a global map of human DNA, has been heralded as a huge scientific and potentially a medical breakthrough. Now it's finished, liberal-Marxist pseudo-scientists and journalists are doing all they can to twist its findings to fit their egalitarian fantasy world. "The human genome project shows there is no genetic way to tell races apart. For scientific purposes, race simply doesn't exist." But genuine scientists are already hitting back with the truth. Evolutionary biologist Gregory M. Cochran has this to say about the Race-Is-Not-A-Scientific-Concept party line emanating from the Human Genome Project: "I don't know what they are talking about. I suspect it's all political. These days, you could certainly screw up your academic career with a single truthful comment."

Racial differences

"No such thing as race? Then how can population geneticists like L.L. Cavalli-Sforza calculate your ancestry from different parts of the world to the percentage point? How come forensic anthropologists can determine a suspect's racial make up from hair or semen left at the scene of a crime? Indeed, the Canadian Society of Forensic Sciences even provides a handy web page where crime fighters can enter the data from DNA extracted

This lot are on their way to Britain. When they arrive, it is you who will have to pay for them, not the government.

from crime scene evidence. Then, by comparing this individual's DNA to racial databases provided by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the FBI, the website calculates for them the odds that the perpetrator belonged to such racial groups as Caucasians, African-Americans, East Asians, East Indians, and 'Saskatchewan Aboriginals.'

Marxist spin

The Human Genome Project spin also claimed "there is no genetic basis for what people describe as race, and found only a few small differences set one person apart from another." Dr. Cochran, however, points out that differences in only a small number of genes can account for racial differences in looks, physical abilities, personality, and other capabilities." "Go ask the guys working on the Dog Genome project about how few genes separate Dachshunds from Weimaraners." Cochran suggests: "Go ask the cattle breeders. There are only a few genetic differences between Guernseys and Longhorns. Yet they sure act different. It's not cultural. Longhorns don't learn how to act like Longhorns by watching Western movies!" The plain fact is that genetic differences are all relative. There are only a few hundred genes that we have in the human genome that are not in the mouse genome. The announcement that the number of human genes is probably in the range of 30,000 rather than 100,000 - as was widely guesstimated until recently - has inspired all sorts of propaganda about how this shows that nurture is more powerful than nature. Robin McKie of The Guardian made the point fairly blatantly: "This is a far lower total than expected, and dramatically undermines claims that human beings are prisoners of their genes. 'We simply do not have enough genes for this idea of biological determinism to be right,' said Dr Craig Venter, the U.S. scientist whose company Celera was a major player in the sequencing project. 'The wonderful diversity of the human species is not hard-wired in our genetic code. Our environments are critical.'"

Real scientists

Once again, Dr. Cochran speaks for the real scientists who know otherwise, but are often too scared of being accused of 'racism' to argue back: "We already have a very good idea of how important genes are from twin and adoption studies. Identical twins are genetically identical. For a surprising number of traits, identical twins raised apart are more similar than fraternal twins raised together. And the correlations between adopted siblings tend to be very low. Whatever the final number of genes turns out to be can't make those facts disappear." The multiracialist spin is the logical equivalent of announcing the discovery that cars have 30,000 parts in them instead of 100,000, and therefore you should buy expensive premium petrol. "Hey," Esso would say, "The Car Genome Project has demonstrated scientifically that your car has fewer parts than you thought it did, so the difference in performance between Jaguars and Austin Metros must be environmental. So buy our petrol and your Metro will be as good as a Jag!"

The real reason

Of course, the reason the liberals are so keen to distort scientific reality to conform with their "we're all the same under the skin" fantasy is that they are desperate to persuade the peoples of the West that it doesn't matter that our ancient cultural and ethnic identities are being submerged in a sea of colour. Unfortunately for the liberal fantasists, the more the British, French, Danes, Italians, Austrians and others see of 'them', the more they realise that they are most definitely not the same as 'us'.

More brainwashing!

So the more immigration they seek to shove down our throats, the more and more hysterical and mendacious their propaganda becomes. That being the case, stand by for even more absurd and over-the-top multiracialist hogwash in the months ahead, because that boatload of Kurds is sure to be followed by many, many more. Within a couple of days of the landing in France, there was a report of a similar hulk limping along the coast of Belgium, although nothing more has since been heard of where it ended up. It won't end there. Sooner or later, we'll be faced not with one boatload of 1,000, but with ten boatloads, or twenty, or thirty. Given the amount of money these people are prepared to pay for their tickets to our welfare state paradise, organised criminal gangs will find it well worthwhile hijacking or buying every flag of convenience wreck in the world to pack with a tiny but profitable fraction of the Third World's surplus population.

Not going to happen

The only thing that would stop them would be if one, just one, Western government declares that such an unarmed Armada is nevertheless an invasion force, and has its navy or airforce sink the first ship to cross a given line. Unfortunately, although Blair and Bush will happily murder Iraqis for the 'crime' of seeking to move about on the roads or in the airspace of their own country, the chances of any politician risking international opprobrium by ordering such an action are nil!

Time is running out

That being the case, even if a few of the latest arrivals do get turned back at Dover (after all, there is an election coming up), it won't stop the endless tide behind them from trying the same thing. So now for the strange thing - nothing could suit us better! Let's face it; there are already so many non-whites in Britain, and their birth rate is so high, and our own ruling elites are so anti-white, that even if all fresh immigration stopped tomorrow, we would still be on course for our own dispossession and eventual slow genocide. And the same is true of virtually every white tribe on earth.

It's up to us!

The only thing that can save us is that the liberals - in their arrogance, their crackpot millennialism, and their fear that an unravelling world economy could lead to a popular backlash against the various aspects of their globalisation project - are rushing to 'finish the job' by swamping us in our own homelands. Hence the talk of 'needing' an extra 75 million immigrants in the EU within twenty years. Hence the Labour government's plans for hundreds of thousands of extra work permits, and the opening of more visa issuing offices all over the Indian sub-continent. Hence the rapid change in the ethnic makeup of your neighbouring town that you, good reader, will undoubtedly have noticed over the last few years.

Make no mistake

Make no mistake, this is the start of the Endgame, and the aim of the game is the extinction of the White Man. But players who have become arrogant, players who are in a terrible hurry, frequently make mistakes. And those mistakes are creating the conditions for the Mother of All Backlashes. The only question is whether we'll be organised enough to take full political advantage of it. And that, in no small measure, is up to you.

Nick Griffin
National Chairman (BNP)

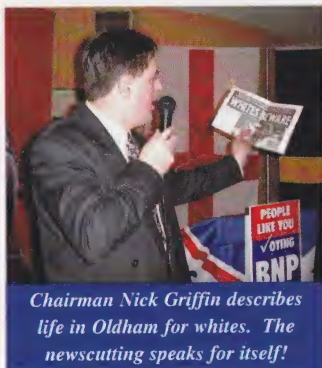

NORTH & SOUTH RALLIES:

SOUTHERN RALLY - The first of the BNP's two Spring rallies was held in a very smart London hotel on Saturday 24th February. The day got off to a great start when the early arrivals burst into spontaneous applause as the huge new backdrop banner was unveiled, and things just got even better after that. More than 200 members and new supporters from all over the South of England enjoyed a fantastic event, superbly chaired by Frank Forte, and addressed by a whole range of excellent speakers, all on top form.

Particularly popular were the 'testimonial' style brief talks from new local officials and rank-and-file activists. The outstanding quality and dedication of people who are often quite recent recruits is an inspiration to all who hear what they have to say. Key party workers also gave polished performances. Party media supremo Dr. Edwards spoke about the criminal role of the British mass media in the planned destruction of Britain. Administration dynamo Chris Green spoke about the growing efficiency of the party's administrative machine. Director of Chairman Nick Griffin describes life in Oldham for whites. The newscutting speaks for itself!

Publicity Paul Golding spoke about the growing and increasingly professional publicity department, covering such areas as publications, publicity material, the internet and future initiatives, ending with a call for everyone to "take part in the Battle for Britain" and to "...do your bit." Director of Technology Simon Darby spoke about the role of new forms of technology in breaking down the barriers of media censorship. Director of Group Development Tony Lecomber spoke about the ups and downs of the year past, declaring that great strides have been taken over the last couple of years, including some of the best election results the party has ever seen. Frank Forte conducted a very successful Dutch Auction which, despite the restrictions imposed by the new laws of donations to political parties, raised the splendid sum of £4,213.38.

The top man!

An amazing £2,000 of this came from a single individual, BNP stalwart Colin Smith, who had saved the money from weeks of overtime in order to be able to make such a generous personal donation. After the collection, everyone present listened to the keynote speech by BNP National Chairman Nick Griffin. Speaking for about 50 minutes without any notes, Mr. Griffin talked of how he and the party's other full-time workers are often inspired and driven on by the sad telephone calls from individuals driven to despair by the injustices and fears imposed on our people by the multiracialist 'experiment'. He concluded his speech by talking about the example giving to us all by Alfred the Great, whose statue features on the stunning backdrop bought with some of the first donations to the Building Blocks appeal. "Just as Alfred built this nation once he had overcome terrifying odds and adversity, so we will rebuild it," he promised.

Our lasting memorial

"And our monuments will not be made of stone or bronze. They'll be the white British children, children just like this, who'll still be playing in the streets, fields, hills and streams of this land. 100 years from now. 200 years from now. A thousand years from now. 40,000 years from now!" As he said this, Mr. Griffin lifted the young son of recent recruits sitting in the front row onto the table by the speakers' podium - and the audience went wild. What an ending! The Southern rally closed with the singing of 'Jerusalem,' which yet again proved an emotional and uplifting finale to a great BNP day.

NORTHERN RALLY - The Northern Spring rally was held a week later, in a smart and atmospheric venue, in the Lancashire town of Oldham - a place where white people live in constant fear of racial attack by Muslim thugs. The format was very similar, although this event was chaired by the BNP's popular Deputy Chairman, Scott McLean. The new backdrop was again much admired, and a new group of new speakers had their own chance to show the audience of about 200 the calibre of the people getting involved with the party these days. Particularly notable among the newcomers was Dewsbury's Nick Cass, who delighted the crowd by telling them of how he and an activist team had gone out the day before expecting to collect about 30 signatures on a petition against anti-white racial attacks, and had returned home with more than 300!

Young blood

Also particularly well received was Mark Collett, a leading member of the British Students' Association, fresh from the BNP's epic battle for free speech at Leeds University. Among the key national officials who addressed this event was the National Treasurer, John Brayshaw, who gave an informative account of how the new restrictions on donations to political parties will affect the BNP and its members. Frank Forte again ran the collection, which, once the small change had been counted, came to an excellent £2,034.88 - a remarkable average of more than £10 per head, which is an accurate gauge of the enthusiasm at the meeting.

When Nick Griffin again stood his young 'living monument' on the platform in front of Alfred the Great, the cheering crowd obviously thought that the day was at an end. But there was a big surprise in store! Mr. Griffin went on to tell them that rhetoric like that was easy but, unless it leads on to effective action, it isn't any use. What would be of use, he said, to the beleaguered whites of Oldham, would be if everyone there would follow him down to a lightning demonstration outside Oldham police station! As he read the leaflet that would be handed out, and as two pretty young BNP girls unfurled the demo banner, the crowd went wild and poured out to turn the emotion of the moment into concrete political action.

A big thanks must go to Chief Steward Warren Bennett and his team, who through their professionalism made these great events possible. Well done!

THE BNP AND THE GENERAL ELECTION

Experience has shown that people won't vote for a party, even if they agree with it in principal, unless it shows signs that it can win! And that is the strategy of the BNP in the next couple of years - not posing as something it isn't, but demonstrating, with the capture of a council seat, that it can win!

Sensible tactics

That is why, at this time, large elections aren't important to the BNP. That is why the BNP is not going to waste huge sums of money and time, just to get half a percent across the country. The benefits of fighting an election must outweigh the costs in terms of resources. Paying over £100,000 for what would be seen as a catastrophic failure is not good political sense. What will make the difference to the party is capturing a council seat, and that is what we are working towards. We have 26.2% in Bexley, 24% in the Black Country, 22% in Burnley, 16% in Dudley, and a national average of 10%. This is where the spark that will light the flame of British Nationalism will come from. As the far-left AFA have said: "...nothing will stop the BNP following in the footsteps of Haider or Le Pen..."

Seats per Region

We cannot list candidates and exact constituencies yet, as plans haven't been finalised. But we can give a rough, and at present incomplete, list of how many seats minimum are going to be fought per region:

South London 3; West London 2; East London 3; Kent 1; Herts 2; E. Midlands 2; West Midlands 4; North West 3; Yorkshire 2; North East 1; Wales 1; South West 1.

NATIONAL TOTAL: 25

● Over 100 BNP activists and around 20 local people chant:

"Rights for whites, Rights for whites!"

Down at the police station, the BNP crowd chanted "Rights for Whites", and took up what used to be an immigrant slogan, but is now a phrase that is becoming all too relevant to white people in places like Oldham: "Racist attacks - we fight back!"

While Tony Lecomber went inside to talk to the duty officer, Nick Griffin gave another short speech on the megaphone, and led more chanting. Meanwhile, local activists handed the specially produced leaflets to passers-by, a number of whom - young males, a pair of teenage girls and several mums with prams - promptly joined in the protest, which later received excellent coverage: "Up to a hundred supporters of the controversial British National Party rallied outside Oldham Police Station at the weekend in a pro-white protest. The group, who came from across Britain for the rally, handed out leaflets, held a banner and used a loud speaker to get their message, 'Equal Rights for Oldham Whites', heard. Police say the short protest, at 5.30pm on Saturday, passed off without incident. And Sgt David Cooper, of the Racial Incident Unit, said: "The group appeared to be well organised, well-disciplined and co-ordinated. There was nothing particularly racially inflammatory about what they said. They demanded positive action and asked the Asian community to extract the small number of hooligans from their community," said the next day's Oldham Chronicle.

Special thanks must go to Oldham organiser Mick Treacy.

THE STANDARD BEARERS

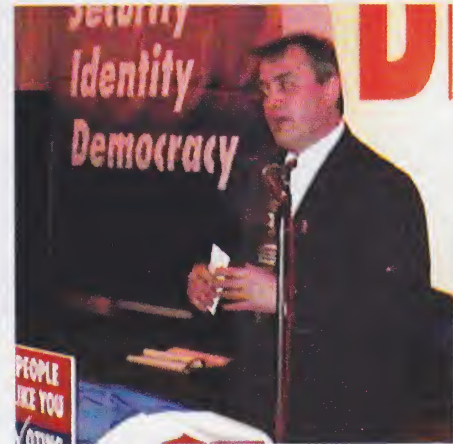

"This is what we are fighting for!" Nick Griffin calls on BNP activists to fight for a future for the millions of British children left on the scrapheap by the main parties!

"Stop hiding in your offices, get out on the streets and protect the white British people of Oldham from anti-white racist attacks!" A message from Chairman Nick Griffin to Oldham Police.

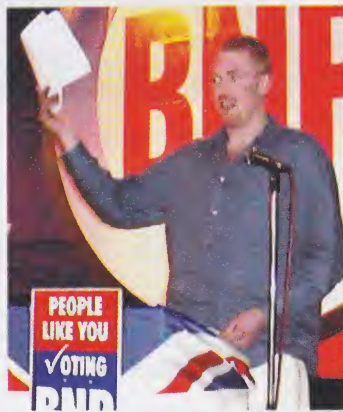

What a start to the year for the British National Party! Leadership and organisers' conferences, new redesigned leaflet range, excellent branch meetings up and down the country, a burst of enquiries and interest from the public, north and south Rallies and a successful lightning demonstration against anti-white racism. Here we salute some of those who took part in making the recent rallies such a success!

FAIR stands for "Families Against Immigrant Racism", the grass-roots community white victims' support group. We're here to provide advice, organisational help, legal backing and a sympathetic ear to white people and communities who are the victims of discrimination and racism. FAIR exists to provide a counter-balance to the huge number of organisations pushing the interests of foreigners. We don't deny them the right to work to promote their ethnic interests, but we believe that white people have equal rights, and we're here to help our communities organise to get them. FAIR recognises that all sections of the white community suffer in different ways under multiculturalism. We're here to help the increasing number of young male victims of anti-white racist violence, the children mugged for their mobile phones or dinner money, the girls and women who get abused by Muslims for wearing attractive clothes, the pensioners whose once familiar world has changed beyond recognition. We're called Families Against Immigrant Racism because whole families are affected, and whole families are getting involved in the campaign to win back equal rights for whites.

YOU DECIDE IF IT'S A RACIAL ATTACK

Under national police guidelines, an incident is supposed to be recorded as racially motivated if someone with knowledge of it says that it is. So whether you are a victim, the relative of a victim, or a witness, if you think that an incident was motivated by anti-white racism, the police are duty bound to record it as such. This is good for two reasons: First, if the perpetrators are caught and brought to justice they face much stiffer penalties, something that may deter other racist thugs and make the streets safer for all of us. Second, if the official statistics show an increase in anti-white racism, there's more chance that something will be done about it. So don't suffer in silence. Tell the police about that racist attack, and keep pressing them until they agree to log it as a racial attack. If they persistently refuse, tell us and we'll pressure them as well. Even quite minor things should be reported, because if the culprits get away with these, they'll get bolder and more aggressive and, sooner or later, someone will get really badly hurt, or even killed. So make that complaint – you might save someone's life.

'MUGGING' = RACIAL ATTACK

Typical local press cutting treating a racial attack as a random crime. Whenever a non-white is attacked in any way, it generally gets recorded as a 'racial attack,' special efforts are made to catch those responsible, and they can get an extra two years in prison. But when the victim's white, police just treat it as an ordinary crime. All too often they don't even bother to file a report. But just think about it. Would the thugs responsible for this cowardly assault have attacked one of their own people in the same way? We all know they wouldn't. Gangs like this don't just chose their victims because they're alone and vulnerable. They pick on people like Jonathan Savidge because they're white! Despite what the police and the papers say, all too many 'muggings' are really anti-white racial attacks.

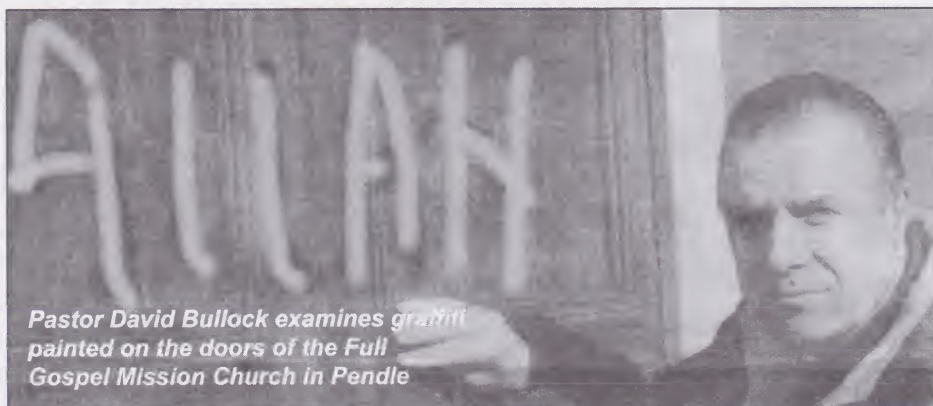

Kicked to the ground by a trio of muggers - Jonathan Savidge Ref: J127-35

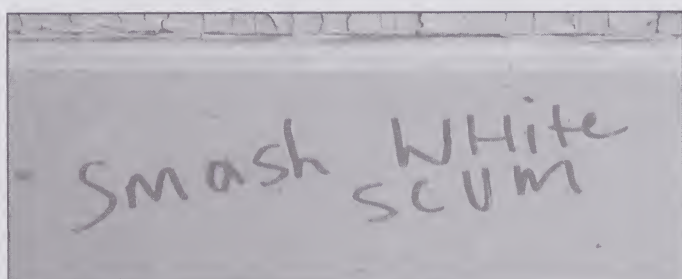

VANDALISM CAN BE RACIST TOO

Vandalism or even arson attacks on churches or pubs (the cornerstones of our traditional community life) are still quite rare, but seem to be increasing, especially in areas where Islamic extremists are recruiting young Muslims.

ANTI-WHITE RACISM STARTS LIKE THIS...

Threatening racist graffiti is becoming more common

...AND ENDS LIKE THIS!

Just one of the ever-growing number of victims of anti-white violence. Mark Clayton (right) was brutally beaten up by two car loads of Muslim thugs in Oldham armed with baseball bats and knives. Slash wounds to his arm were so deep that he nearly lost his hand, and is likely to be permanently disabled.

"WHAT ABOUT ME?"

Q: "My family's Irish, and I'm suffering from anti-white racism. What about me. Do you think I'm an immigrant too?"

A: No. You're white, it's as simple as that. English, Scottish, Welsh, Ulster and Irish, we might have had quarrels in the past, but we're all closely related European tribes and – to the 'minority' racists, we're all White. That means we're all potential targets for official discrimination and anti-white racism alike. We've got to stick together so, although FAIR uses the cross of St. George's as a symbol of our traditional identity and determination to resist the drive to turn Britain into a Muslim state, we welcome to people who are proud of their white Irish, Scots or Welsh roots as well!

VIOLENCE ISN'T THE ONLY PROBLEM

"Positive discrimination" puts white people to the back of the housing queue. It can give non-whites the chance to leap-frog over better qualified whites for promotion at work. Labour and Lib-Dem councils fund facilities for ethnic minorities while cutting back on our social services. Left wing teachers turn Religious Education lessons into 'hate whitey' guilt trips for our kids, and the national curriculum is designed to deny them the sense of identity and pride in their heritage that is essential to their self-respect. All these things are anti-white racism, and all are forced on us against the democratic wishes of the majority. When did we ever vote for all this Politically Correct rubbish? Never, but until we organise to stand up for our rights, things will only get worse!

What we do...

Anti-white racist attacks in Oldham are out of control BEFORE SOMEONE GETS KILLED

We demand:
That Oldham council put pressure on the leaders of the Asian community to bring the thugs responsible under control by telling them "All applications for further mosque and Asian community projects will be automatically rejected until all racist attacks on white people STOP".

That Oldham police put plainclothes officers on patrol as decoys. Then when the racist thugs arrive, they should be arrested by hidden police teams - and brought to JUSTICE.

That's all it will take to cut out the growing cancer of anti-white racist attacks by a minority of young Asian thugs. But if it's not done, they're going to start killing people.

If you agree with us, get in touch today. Because, working together, we can make sure that Oldham whites get equal rights.

◆ This is the kind of leaflet that FAIR volunteers put out. For years, a very effective network of pro-immigrant lobbies have pushed the police and local authorities into giving favourable treatment to ethnic minorities. At last, thanks to FAIR, more and more local white communities are learning how to launch an effective Public Relations fight back. As the old saying goes, "it's the squeaky hinge that gets the oil."

We the undersigned wish to draw to the attention of the authorities our concern at the race-hate attacks on whites in the Dewsbury area. We the undersigned call on the authorities the police, Kirklees council and Kirklees Race Equality council to publicly condemn those race-hate attacks on whites.

HOW FAIR CAN HELP YOU!

First of all, we'll listen sympathetically - which is more than you can say for the trendy lefty types in council offices, Citizens Advice Bureaux, etc. With FAIR on your side, you and your neighbours won't feel alone any more.

We can provide advice, sample leaflets, petitions and all the things you need to run your own local campaign for equal rights and fair treatment for whites in your area. Everything you need can be downloaded from our website, or we'll send a volunteer to see you personally.

We have a full legal team available. Initial advice can be provided by an experienced para-legal advisor, and we have access to solicitors and barristers for more detailed advice. Legal Aid or 'no-win, no fee' agreements may be available.

RIGHTS FOR WHITES - IT'S ONLY FAIR!

- ☐ Yes! I've had enough too. I want to join FAIR and help support white victims of immigrant racism
- ☐ I've had a personal experience of anti-white racism that I want to talk about. Please contact me in strictest confidence
- ☐ I want to meet up with FAIR volunteers doing things like collecting signatures on petitions against anti-white discrimination and racism
- ☐ I'd like to become a FAIR observer. Please put me in touch with a FAIR volunteer who'll tell me more about it and give me a local phone number to call to report anti-white incidents in my neighbourhood

INTERVIEW WITH A MAN WHO'S SEEN THE LIGHT!

Although the regular ID interview typically involves an active member of the British National Party with whom other potential recruits can identify, the interview that follows is so exceptional that we're running it even though the individual in question has to remain anonymous. He is the editor of a big local newspaper in a former mill town in the North of England. All references which could identify the town or the paper have been removed, but the interview is otherwise as recounted by the BNP activist who talked with him last month. Our interviewer writes: "I wrote to the local paper complaining about a planned mosque. When the letter wasn't published I wrote to the editor to complain. He responded by inviting me to meet him and discuss the matter. The following is taken from notes made from memory as soon as I left the meeting. It certainly isn't exaggerated in any way - this man really has moved from a position of great suspicion or even hostility towards the party, to being very sympathetic to our message. And, as he made clear when I talked to him, he isn't the only one!"

Activist: Please can you tell me why my letter wasn't published?

Editor: At first I thought it was the wrong time to publish the letter (ie it was the time of Ramadan), but after showing it to my management team, I now realise that I could have published at least 3/4 of what you'd written. I am sorry for this and hold my hands up to this error.

Activist: Do you agree that there is racial tension between the White and Asian populations in the area, and that that tensions are exacerbated by local council's well-known preference for the welfare of the Asians relative to that of Whites.

The East London mosque. Britain is facing a process of "Islamisation"!

Editor: From my understanding of the situation I should have to agree.

Activist: Do you recognise that Xxxxx, which is 99% Asian, is a dangerous place for Whites?

Do you know that most Whites refuse to walk through Xxxxx after dark?

Editor: Yes, I have grave concerns for this area. I wouldn't walk there when it's dark, nor would I allow my family to walk through that area. I think the police and Asian leaders should get together to discuss this, and I think the police should make more efforts to make the area safe.

Activist: Do you realise that 90% of the damage done in Xyzxyz Park is the responsibility of Asian youths. (There's been much correspondence in your paper about Asian graffiti on monuments in the Park) What do you think to the fact that no one has yet been prosecuting for this continuous vandalism?

Editor: Yes, I know most of the damage is caused by Asian

TIME TO TAKE A LOOK AT THE CRUMBLING TRANSPORT SYSTEM

Transport is the basis on which every day life is conducted in this country. It is used for communication, haulage, business deals and leisure. For the individual, public transport is really and truly the most sensible course round the larger towns and cities.

Take the London regional underground system; we have an example of engineering from as far back as the mid 19th Century. It shows how clever the engineers of the era were and what industry we were capable of. To dig tunnels beneath one of Europe's busiest cities was a great feat in itself.

A system crumbling

Today though, a lot of tube stations are in such a state of neglect that it will take literally billions of pounds to bring them up-to-date. Successive governments have disregarded their responsibility to invest seriously. It was not until so many lives were needlessly lost in the Kings Cross disaster that the system was looked at. Litter was the problem, years and years of rubbish, and all it took was for a cigarette end to be discarded on an escalator.

Ongoing neglect

Users of our railways will not need reminding of their continued tragic neglect. When we really look at the underground system we find that this is still an area reflecting the demise of our country. Next time you are on the tube, have a look at the structure of the stations. You youths, but for some reason if they are caught by the police, they seem to be less severe on them - as do the courts. I know as well as a lot of other people do that if it were White youths then things would be different.

Activist: What is your opinion of the high incidence of Asian on White race attacks in the area?

Editor: I am concerned that the police have not defined these attacks as racist, and since that has been the case this newspaper has been unable to define them so. I note that no perpetrators have yet been apprehended.

Activist: Do you know what proportion of your readership is Asian?

Editor: Sales to the ethnic minorities are poor. They are not great newspaper readers.

Activist: If a political party stood up more for the White people of our towns and evened out the council's anti-White ways, would your paper support that party?

Editor: We would do as we've done in the past with the Labour, Conservative and Liberal Parties. We would publish statements, news, and other items provided they were kept in accordance with the guidelines and restrictions, which you have already seen.

Activist: While most mainly White council estates are going to rack and ruin the council is happy to give large grants to home owners in the Asian communities, Are you aware of this and if so what is your opinion of it?

Editor: People think I live in a leafy-green world, but I have lived in this area all my life. I have seen the obvious bias practised by this council.

At the end of the meeting (which lasted about 60 minutes) the rising popularity of the British National Party was mentioned. The editor said that people were losing their 'fear' of the British National Party, and that recently people he knew had expressed a curiosity about the Party and what it stands for. He said more and more people seemed to be looking beyond the confines of the Lib-Lab-Con.

If you would like to be considered as a candidate for the regular Identity interview, please drop us a line and tell us a bit about yourself. We're looking for all sorts of people. Whether you've got a long and interesting life history and have seen this country change out of all recognition, or whether you're recently out of school and have never known a time when white Britons weren't second class citizens, your experiences and reasons for joining the BNP, plus photos, may well make a very interesting article. We look forward to hearing from you.

will see that most of them are literally crumbling at the edges, ceilings are patched and peeling, and old Victorian tiles are literally encrusted with corrosion, with stalactite deposits on the surface, where they have not fallen off.

Degeneracy

Almost as bad is the dehumanising, brutal, cave man 'architecture' of the 'new' Westminster station. No doubt it boasts some illusory civic award or other to reassure the yet doubtful citizenry, but that can't hide the fact that, if the money had been spent on the old stations when they needed it our system would probably still be the envy of Europe in respect of the architecture of its age.

Further decline

As it is the stations are shabby skeletons of their former glory, shamefully too far gone, if still usable; quite matched to the delays and queues we are subjected to to simply buy a ticket, to the sardine crush, to the resident beggars after our "spare change" and the hordes of scavengers after our ticket, the static escalators, the greasy handholds, littered newspapers, lack of air conditioning, pornographic and brain-numbingly irrelevant 'adverts' defacing every wall, and the dropouts who subject us to their choice of 'music' in search of pennies of appreciation. The problem with the stations is of course money, but also 'breaking the link' at the busiest stations so that they can be worked on. If the links are severed, so is London.

Possible solutions

The only viable solution is to relieve the underground system by using the bus network while the tube is massively restored, rebuilt and modernised. But first the congestion of London's roads will have to be put right.

They are already being used to their limit to cope with the ever-growing number of commuters, many of who are too scared of crime to use public transport.

Nationalism needed

Years of under-funding and neglect from successive governments have created the situation we today suffer, and despite the big talk of whatever government takes the stage, it is a burden that won't go away, and which lies very heavily on their shoulders. Only when a BNP government comes to power - and puts the needs and dignity of the community above those of quick political benefit - will we see a thorough reconstruction of a transport system the British people will be proud of for generations to come.

• Time to outlaw...

RITUAL SLAUGHTER!

Whatever opinion party members may hold on the rights and wrongs of hunting, I'm sure we all agree that Labour's raising of the issue had far less to do with 'animal welfare' and more to do with appeasing their left-wing core, whilst at the same time diverting public attention away from the truly important issues of the day.

or if 'animal welfare' were such a top priority then why would they not go the whole 'hog' and ban the mass, daily ritual slaughter of livestock for the Moslem and Jewish communities? Both similar in method, Halal and Schechita religious slaughter involves the painful and distressing death by bleeding of the animals, taking between 15 seconds and 6 minutes, after first having its throat cut to die. Some of them believe that the meat tastes better if the animal dies in prolonged fear and pain.

Cruel and savage

Compassion in World Farming announced in 1986 that "Ritual slaughter is a cruel and savage custom which will remain legal in Britain only so long as the public remains silent." Since this statement, this bastion of animal welfare seems to have succumbed to the dark forces of political correctness and their silence is deafening. And the supposed political representatives of our animal-loving nation show no signs of concern. Open hypocrisy and PC lip-service is a soulless sickness of our age. It's time to outlaw cruel and inhuman ritual slaughter!

Darren James, Devon

LABOUR intends to ban fox-hunting on the grounds it is both cruel and outdated with the support of the greater portion of the public. By this same reasoning is "Tony Turpin" the highway robber going to seek to next ban the ritual slaughter of animals for food consumption by the Muslim (Halal) and Jewish (Schechita) communities? The religious slaughter of animals is an evil archaic practice and involves the cutting of the throats of the livestock allowing a painful and distressing death by bleeding. Realistically, I think it will be the shooters, anglers, rabbiters etc to next feel the force of Blair's jackboot.

PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT LAUNCHES RE-DESIGNED LEAFLET RANGE!

The British National Party's Publicity Department has now produced the first in a range of reworked and brand new national leaflets to arm the movement for the fertile years of growth and success to come. These leaflets are testament to the growing professionalism of the BNP.

These have been redesigned to a very attractive standard format, with the reverse sides in particular having had their messages 'boiled down' to three key bullet-points.

Soundbite politics

Living in a world of soundbite discourse, where thanks to the modern education system millions of perfectly decent people are barely literate, we have had to make our leaflets much more simple. This is bound to increase the follow-up rate, hence rewarding our activists efforts and helping to build the party even faster!

Incentive measures

The enquiry box also features small pictures of the front covers of our newspaper Freedom and our magazine Identity, illustrating the key items that enquirers will get in their information packs, to give more incentive to them to write in.

The time is now

A sample of the first of these leaflets were handed out at the Southern and Northern Rallies held recently, and were printed using the party's first digital printing press (see page 13.) They were well received by all those present. With public sympathy and interest in the British National Party and its policies seeming to grow by the day (as shown by the upsurge in the enquiry rate recently), there's no doubt that the appearance of a wider range of ultra-attractive leaflets will encourage party organisers and active sympathisers alike to make the extra effort needed to get out even larger quantities of leaflets over this coming Spring and Summer - something that is bound to boost recruitment and help to build the party everywhere the work is put in.

P.G.

Above: Albanian 'asylum seekers' pour off a freighter into Italy. Similar boatloads are now appearing in France. Once there, EU rules make it easy for them to join the flood of immigrants and bogus asylum seekers, pouring into Britain. It's not a question of race, it's a question of greed!

DO YOU THINK...

- that Britain should stop taking in, housing, feeding and caring for thousands of 'asylum seekers' at a time when homelessness and hospital waiting lists are steadily rising? YES/NO
 - that local councils should start putting native-born British people to the front of the housing queue for a change? YES/NO
 - that the Home Secretary is wrong to give an extra 100,000 asylum seekers the right to stay in Britain just because the authorities haven't been able to investigate the often bogus claims as to why they should be allowed in? YES/NO
 - that we should stop building new houses on green field sites to make room for 150,000 extra immigrants every year? YES/NO
 - that the politicians were wrong to allow mass immigration to change the face of our country, without ever even asking if we wanted it? YES/NO
- 'Yes' every time? That's what we think too! That's why we're building the British National Party, and why you should join our campaign to put the British people first, before bogus asylum seekers and before new immigrants... before it's too late!

ASYLUM SEEKERS?
LONGER HOSPITAL WAITING LISTS?
MORE WAGE CUTS? MORE HOMELESSNESS?
ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!

1 The BNP calls for a halt to all further asylum seeking, and the immediate deportation of criminal, illegal immigrants

2 The BNP demands that local authorities house local British people before asylum seekers

3 The BNP demands that the £4 billion a year wasted on keeping asylum seekers be spent on our NHS and pensioners

THE PARTY IN BRIEF! A ROUND UP OF THE MONTH'S PARTY NEWS!

■ Sixty adult members and supporters, and a crèche-load of babies and youngsters, attended the first meeting of the refounded Dewsbury BNP last month. The meeting was ably chaired by new organiser Nick Cass, the former all-England squash champion and world number three interviewed in last month's Identity. The first speaker was BNP Press Officer Dr. Phill Edwards, who focussed on examples of how the liberal-left uses the media and the education system to brainwash adults and children alike in the alleged wonders of what is now a very sick society. After his well-received talk, there was a break for a well-prepared buffet and refreshments. This was followed by a speech by BNP National Chairman Nick Griffin, who told the audience of some of the desperately sad phone calls received by the party's telephone staff, especially from pensioners in despair at the way the country for which they fought and worked has gone so far downhill. He told the audience that, unlike the pensioners abandoned by successive Tory and Labour governments and left to despair alone, as BNP members they all have a chance - and a duty - to help to turn the situation around. The meeting ended with considerable enthusiasm for the work ahead - Dewsbury BNP is very much back on the map! The collection raised £368.

■ The party has been receiving more enquiries as of late. An average of 7 people a day asking for information packs centrally (main phone lines) has convinced the leadership that the BNP could be set for a period of good growth - bearing in mind that under the present BNP system most enquiries go to their local branch so the nationwide total is far higher! Couple this with the fact that the the publicity department has announced that it is receiving an average of two enquiries a day asking for information packs over the internet - something is definitely going on out there!

PARTY PURCHASES INSTANT PRINT FACILITY!

For the first time in its entire history, the BNP now has its own instant printing facility! This long overdue step forward comes with the purchase of a high-tech digital duplicator, complete with computer interface which links it directly to our most powerful Desk Top Publishing computer.

The benefits: 8000 prints an hour; Three colours; computer inter-face linking it to our Desktop Publishing computer, and much, much more!

Long-run national leaflets will still be printed commercially, but the new machine is ideal for instant response short-run leaflets, and for producing very cheap campaign material on local issues.

An invaluable tool

This makes it an invaluable tool for our drive to sink the local roots needed to prepare the ground for future council election victories. Significantly, the company who have sold us this machine have also provided large numbers to the Lib-Dems, who have more experience than any party in British politics of winning council seats despite having no traditionally solid voter base (and, for that matter, no policies either!)

Benefits

The BNP's newly acquired instant-print facility proved its worth within days of our buying it when our computer-linked digital duplicator was used to produce a run of cheap, instant leaflets for use in a forthcoming council by-election within 24 hours of the party's decision to contest the seat! Then, just a couple of days later, the machine was used to produce the leaflets used at the highly successful Oldham police station protest against anti-white racial attacks. This leaflet was only written at 10pm the evening before, but hundreds of copies were ready within a matter of minutes to go up north with the London-based speakers very early the following morning. It is also hoped to add a heavy-duty paper guillotine and a folding machine to our mini-print shop in the near future, which would also save the party substantial sums of money.

Community politics

Together with the speed with which we can pick up on a topical issue, this is what makes these machines so useful in local politics. Of course, the party's first digital duplicator is based in London, so is virtually useless for community politics in other areas of the nation, but, what we should aim for is to have one of these excellent political tools in every BNP region, putting the party on an instant footing, ready for any challenge.

"BUILDING BLOCKS" FUND!

While the Labour and Tory parties are bankrolled by multi-million donations from big businessmen buying influence and knight-hoods, the British National Party has only one source of funds - the ordinary, decent men and women who are its members and supporters.

Building Blocks fund targets:

- 1) Training and equipping regional treasurers £1,000; 2) Top quality anti-virus software for 12 key computers £500; 3) Internet radio station £3,000; 4) Design and preparation of new leaflet range £500; 5) Revamp and upgrade of key BNP circles and recruitment material £2,000; 6) Training canvassing teams £1,000; 7) Further improvements to display backdrops for major meetings £500; 8) Tapes and related materials for personal recruitment experiment £1,000; 9) White Victims' Support Group £500; 10) Design and production of activists' and organisers' support packs £2,000; 11) Production of Manifesto £2000.

NOTEPAD

■ We apologise for the lateness of this issue. The decision was taken to wait a few days so as to allow us to include the North of Britain Rally, which was to take place several days after the publishing date on the 3rd March. We took this decision because if we had covered the Northern Rally in the April issue, it would have been the scenario of "loads of space for old news" and would have been impractical.

■ We would also like to apologise for the various missing traditional "big letters" that mark the start of articles in the last issue. This was down to a mistake by our image bureau, who have told us that because of the mistake, the party is to receive a whopping discount on the image setting costs of this issue!

■ Haider demands compensation for Ethnic Germans

Ethnic Germans expelled from what is now the Czech Republic and Slovenia after World War Two should receive compensation, says former Austrian Freedom Party leader Joerg Haider. Eleven million ethnic Germans were forcibly expelled from various parts of eastern Europe between 1945-47, in the largest and most brutal act of ethnic cleansing in the whole of history. Approximately two million civilians, mainly women and children, were murdered or died of starvation, cold or exhaustion. Many Austrians are descended from survivors of this holocaust, and feel strongly that the sufferings of their parents and grandparents have been completely ignored. Many are demanding an apology and restitution of stolen property before they will support the Czech and Slovene applications to join the EU.

■ People of Switzerland say 'no'!

The people of Switzerland voted overwhelmingly against joining the EU in a referendum at the start of March. The pro-EU government had planned to revive Switzerland's application for membership by 2007, but with a huge 75 per cent majority opposing the idea, this is now probably impossible. Even the French-speaking western parts of the country, which previously favoured membership, voted heavily against giving up their independence.

■ 'Race' row in Canada

The French-speaking Bloc Quebecois in Canada has been hit by a massive row over 'racism', after one of its MPs has attacked its liberal leaders for "embracing the extinction of the French-Canadian identity." The comments by 55-year old MP Ghislain Lebel coincide with a move by the Bloc's youth wing towards an implicitly white ethnic view of French-Canadian identity, away from the 'inclusive', multi-culti leftism that the party used to follow before mass non-white immigration began to engulf the French-speaking parts of the country. Lebel points out that there is no point seeking political sovereignty if multiculturalism destroys the ethnic and cultural identity that makes a nation in the first place.

● Nationalism in Australia:

ONE NATION REPORT: "WELL AND TRULY BACK!"

One Nation was dead, said all the 'experts'. Killed by infighting, financial difficulties, legal assaults and an open conspiracy by other parties to place One Nation last under Australia's preferential voting system. Then came last month's election in Western Australia.

The ruling Liberals (Tory equivalents) refused to change their policy of telling voters to put One Nation last when it came to preference voting, and One Nation responded by telling voters not to give preference votes to any sitting parliamentarian, regardless of their party. As a result the Liberals were wiped out. One Nation won three seats in the Upper House, but the most important impact was in the Lower House; even though One Nation didn't win any seats, its preference votes put Labor in power with only 37% of the primary vote.

Intelligent tactics

Another state election followed, in Queensland. The Labor government there had a narrow majority, but had been rocked by scandal. Yet again, however, the Tory Liberals and their National coalition partners refused to deal with One Nation, and this time the Labor state government didn't tell its voters to put One Nation last with their preference votes. The result? Labor won a landslide. The Tory Coalition was decimated. One Nation won three seats and up to 37 per cent of the primary vote, with an average of 21 per cent. Most importantly, One Nation now has the power to bring down governments. Major party politicians are now defying their leaders and negotiating preference deals with One Nation, in a desperate bid to save their seats.

Moving mainstream

The way ahead is clear. Politics always "evolves" into a two-sided contest, and now that the Tories have been wiped out, the field is clear for One Nation to fill the void. One Nation has taken a longer-term strategy: by allowing the Labor party to win a landslide now, they will effectively become the alternative government in three years' time. The media still haven't worked this out - they are used to political parties who never plan beyond the next election. The plan is already working well. Large numbers of Labor MPs know that they will lose their seats at the next election, so they're already fighting amongst themselves to get their snouts in the trough while they can. The public will quickly become totally sick of them.

Anti-Globalisation

One Nation's subsequent decision to preference sitting members last regardless of party was a masterstroke. The major party MPs are now scrambling to save their own skins. The other lesson is the value on focussing on nationalistic economic policies. Labour & Liberal have effectively turned Australia into a one party state with their bipartisan policies on free trade and globalisation. One Nation is the only party to oppose these policies, the votes are starting to flow, and the media is having trouble making One Nation appear to be a single-issue anti-immigration party.

One Nation leader

Best news

But I've saved the best news until last. The more rabid the media becomes, the more people turn to One Nation. I lost count of the number of times somebody sent an email to their internet based "discussion site" along the lines of: "I wouldn't normally vote for One Nation, but now I will just to spite you." They know that their anti-One Nation tirades just increase the anti-globalist vote, but they just can't stop themselves. Journalists have developed a conditioned reflex, which forces them to bestow their 'holier than thou' morals onto us insolent lesser mortals, who have forgotten our place. They can't keep their mouths shut; the conditioned reflex is totally irresistible. It is their Achilles' Heel. One Nation has its faults, but Australian nationalists are feeling good. The whole PC system is on the verge of collapsing like a pack of cards. The federal election, equivalent to a General Election in the UK, is due later this year. It can't come soon enough!

BOSSES PLAN ANTI-ONE NATION CAMPAIGN

Giant multinational companies are planning a major propaganda campaign to counter growing popular opposition to globalisation and the shock One Nation vote that it has just produced. According to the Australian Financial Review, businesses are concerned that the "far Right" party will end the hitherto bipartisan approach of the major parties towards free-trade. The campaign was raised at a meeting of the government's Trade Policy Advisory Committee. The 13-member committee comprises senior business figures from companies such as Telstra, Rio Tinto and BHP. The sight of these business giants - which most ordinary Australians detest - queuing up to interfere in democratic politics is likely to have the very reverse of what they wish. It has also confused and demoralised many far-left activists, still trying to cling to the threadbare old banner slogans about white 'racists' being the 'boot-boys of capitalism'!

● A series on the myths and legends of the British isles by Stephen McDonald

THE LEGEND OF HERWARD THE WAKE

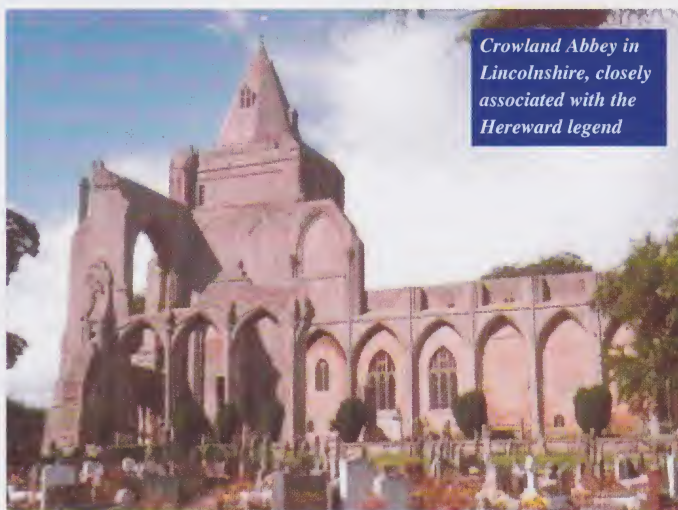

Previous generations in these islands haven't always been as supine as the current generation of Britons in the face of invasion from outsiders.

The name of Hereward the Wake lives on nearly 1,000 years after he reportedly lived. Whether he was real or the result of a fanciful imagination we do not know, but we know that 11th century England was certainly a time of major change.

Foreign invasion

The invasion of William of Normandy and the defeat of King Harold at Hastings led to changes in the government of heads had replaced that of his brother above the door. News of Hereward's exploits spread and he became the leader of a mixed band of patriotic English and Danish warriors, who flocked to join him at his new base at the Abbey of Ely. In those days Ely was a real island (name derived from island of Eels) surrounded on all sides by wide rivers and swamps. The new king William was furious at this act of resistance and personally led a campaign to defeat the rebel Fenland

England; much of the land was seized and handed over to William's followers, and the language of the State was to change from Saxon to Norman French. Great castles were built across the land to assert the authority of the handful of Normans who took control.

The legend

Hereward, so legend says, was made an outlaw by Edward the Confessor in 1062 but returned to England on hearing the news that the conquering Normans had seized his father's estates. On his return he found that the Norman occupiers had not only taken the land, but also slain his brother, and threateningly placed his head above the door of his house. With an avenging fury at this outrage, he descended upon the murderers and slew them all. Next day fourteen Norman folk. Hereward rode his horse, called Swallow, to the town of Brandon where William had his base, and on the way he met a potter, who agreed to exchange clothes with him and lend him his wares. In this disguise Hereward got into William's camp and overheard his plans. And when William built a wooden causeway over the swamps, and sent his soldiers along it to attack Ely, Hereward's men, hidden in the reeds, set fire to the causeway decks.

Daring and clever

The Normans were engulfed in flames, and those who tried to escape either drowned in the inhospitable marsh or were picked off by English arrows. This daring and clever patriotic resistance made Hereward a great folk hero to his contemporaries. Songs were sung and stories were told about him for a century afterwards, inspiring new generations to resist the hated occupational Norman aristocracy. It is said that he never slept in his bed, but to one side of it, ever watchful of night-time attacks from the Norman enemy.

A symbol of resistance

He became an exile again, and sought sanctuary, initially in the wilds of Northumbria where he fought with a ferocious bear. He was followed and he made his way to Ireland, Cornwall and eventually to Flanders where his story ends with his murder by a band of Normans. Like so many other characters in British legend, he has no grave, no body was ever recovered and there are no real records that he ever existed. The story of Hereward was first recorded in a Chronicle scribed by a monk in the 12th century Gesta Herewardii Saxonis, and the medieval legend was revived in Victorian Britain by Charles Kingsley with his 1866 romantic novel Hereward the Wake.

An example to us!

Whether real or created, the heroic idyll of watchful Hereward remains a symbol of resistance against foreign oppression. Our generation now needs a new Hereward, an intelligent and courageous, even heroic leader, to help us fight the war being waged against our British values, identity and our people. Otherwise the growing mass coloured immigration that is now being treasonously forced upon us by our supposedly accountable politicians and the encroaching steps toward a European superstate, will soon mean the final end of us as a people. Let us flock to the cause of the watchful British National Party while there is time!

The Bell Curve by Richard Herrnstein and Charles Murray reviewed by John Armstrong

Such was the impact of The Bell Curve in academic circles when it was published, and so rich is it in information on the importance of heredity over environmental factors in shaping individual and group intelligence, that it is an invaluable tool in blowing away the liberal-internationalist dogma that pervades Western society.

Not a racist book

The book commences by ridiculing the liberal views that intelligence cannot be measured, that there is no such thing as general intelligence, and that such testing is culturally biased and hence "racist". Herrnstein (who is Jewish) and Murray show that whilst the average Caucasian IQ in the United States is 100, that of African Americans is 85, while conversely the IQ average of Oriental immigrants is 115: so how then can the tests be culturally biased towards whites?

Proven using science

Put bluntly, general intelligence governs morality and good citizenship: the prison population is less intelligent than the general population, and it is not girls with IQs of 115+ who are having teenage pregnancies but low IQ mothers who are giving birth to low IQ children. The observant person may already have surmised this but it is useful to see it being confirmed scientifically.

HAVE YOU JOINED THE TRAFALGAR CLUB?

REASONS TO JOIN:

- Our party does miracles on a tiny budget - but we would do so much more if we had the funds! The BNP cannot rely on billionaire businessmen!
- The BNP runs on donations from its supporters. Like all parties membership subscriptions only cover the basics.
- Trafalgar Club membership costs only £3.46 a week - the cost of two pints of beer or a cheap meal. That's all you'll have to pay!
- Your forefathers died for Britain in their millions - all you have to do is donate £3.46 a week!
- If the Trafalgar Club had 1,000 members that would raise £180,000 a year - the party could fight elections everywhere and distribute The Voice of Freedom as a leaflet - think of the impact!
- If the Trafalgar Club had 2,000 members we'd have £360,000 a year to spend and be a major party!
- If the Trafalgar Club had 5,000 members we'd have nearly £1 million a year to spend and be unstoppable!
- Do you care enough about your family's and our country's future to give away a little more than three pounds a week?
- The time has never been better in fifty years for the patriotic cause to move forward - all over Europe, in France, Norway, Denmark and Austria to name a few, the BNP is joining the growing list of successful nationalist parties sweeping into prominence all over Europe!
- We can only do it with your financial support!
- Monthly draw, annual dinner, club tie and regular bulletins etc. for all members.
- Is your country worth £3.46 a week? Join the Trafalgar Club today!

Trafalgar Club members make a real difference to the BNP! Its members pledge a minimum of £15 per month, in return for which they are entered into a boxed pen set prize draw every month, receive occasional special internal news bulletins, and are entitled to attend the annual Trafalgar Club dinner free of charge. In addition, every fully paid up member receives a Trafalgar Club tie (or a personalised organiser file in the case of ladies). The tie carries the first two 'words' of Nelson's semaphore signal before the Battle of Trafalgar - "England Expects." As the Trafalgar Club enters its second year, new members are very welcome. Please telephone 0700 900 1493 to request your dues card and to join the Trafalgar Club.
